REVIEW

by Cleveland Amory

"Nice guys," Leo Durocher once said, "finish last." "A happy company," Sam Goldwyn once said, "makes a bad picture." This show is heartening proof that such cynicism doesn't always hold true. These nice, happy guys may not finish first, in the ratings or on their jobs, but they make a fine picture—if not every week, at least most weeks. All right, many of their jokes are old. But look at it this way. With old friends like these, who needs new jokes? Here somehow even the oldest routine seems, if not new, at least different.

The story itself is old—the little man up against the big bad world and trying to keep the big bad wolf from the door. But again it's so old that nowadays it seems new—particularly among so many of this season's slick shows which attempt to get with it in this modern get-rich-quick world and end up being less slick than sick. After so many winners, there is something vastly appealing about two losers. Bert Gramus (Herb Edelman), standing there at his hamburger stand, grasping at straws, not to mention sodas, assumes truly heroic proportions as he climbs the ladder of failure with, on one side, his short-suffering wife Claudia (Joyce Van Patten) and on the other his side-order sidekick Rufus (Bob Denver).

One week they hire a beautiful waitress (Marilyn Dervin), whom Rufus promptly falls in love with, of course. Bert declares that he is losing a son. "I'm like a father to that kid," he tells Claudia. "That kid," replies Claudia, "happens to be just three days older than you are." Another week a Greek master builder (Tito Vandis) tries to add a patio to the hamburger stand to answer the competition from the vaunted "Mother Watson" (Liam Dunn) chain. And this episode was so fraught with frustration that it moved Rufus to poetry:

You can be rich enough to own a yacht,

A hundred feet from tip to tip.

But it doesn't mean a thing at all Without a ship called Friendship.

These were funny enough, but the funniest Good Guys episode we've seen yet—indeed one of the funniest half hours we've seen all year—was the one in which Rufus persuades Bert to advertise on TV. During the rehearsal Bert has trouble saying "pecan buttered cream pie." It keeps coming out either "pookin battered croom pie" or "Pocono vanishing cream pie." Rufus is furious. "One line," he says. "One simple line! What's so tough about saying pookin peter . . ." But this is as nothing to the live commercial itself, when Bert freezes altogether, and Rufus has to jump into the breach and speak for him: "He's Bert of Bert's Place. A friendly place where people drop in for a fine tasty meal. . . ." Well said, Bert. . . . I'm Rufus Butterworth, a taxicab driver. I'm one of the countless thousands who drop in for conversation and good food. And you know why? Let the host speak for himself. . . ." Finally Bert speaks. "Gladly. I . . . I . . ." and the freeze again. And, of course, back to Rufus. "Well put, Bert. You sure know how to turn a phrase."

■ Next time somebody tells you, in the favorite cliche of our day, that we should have "better television," ask him what, for instance, he means: a Brigitte Bardot variety show or a conversation with Justice Hugo L. Black? The latter program represented an unprecedented action for a sitting member of the U.S. Supreme Court, and resulted in an hour of stimulating, candid and vital views on some of the most pressing issues of contemporary America.

Your friend's answer is likely to be Justice Black—and that will be the moment for you to inform him that when this choice was given to television viewers in our greatest metropolitan area on a recent Tuesday night, the viewers opted almost 5 to 1 for Brigitte. (And, with all three network choices tallied, almost 8 to 1 against Justice Black.)

■ Remember this when next you hear the networks berated for their programming habits.

There are those who feel that the officials of TV should rise above the considerations of popular taste, and give the people what management thinks they should have for their own good.

■ This line of reasoning presupposes that people, in the privacy of their homes, can be made to watch something in which they are not genuinely interested (they can't, of course; the Black interview lost almost a fifth of even its own relatively small audience during the hour it was on the air).

We agree that the Nation's stations have a responsibility to make such programs available, and that they are important to the Nation's welfare, for no democracy can prevail whose citizens ignore its problems.

■ But those who are forever casting each entrepreneur of television as a heavy in the bleak programming story should understand that there is a far more influential character in television decision-making: you.

A new examination of cable TV, believed by many to be the wave of TV's future

By Richard K. Doan

President-elect Richard M. Nixon and his staff, ensconced pending his inauguration in New York City's plush Hotel Pierre, have been watching TV on three receiving sets with extra channels showing United Press International news-ticker stories, continuously updated weather data, Broadway-theater news, and Wall Street developments.

Meanwhile, down in Greensboro, N.C., 6500 homes have access to a baby-sitting TV channel that plays animated cartoons continuously from 8 to 11 A.M. and from 3 to 6 P.M. Another channel these homes can watch prints out New York Stock Exchange quotations throughout market hours and reviews each day's trading up to 7 o'clock in the evening. A third channel televises Associated Press news all day.

In Farmington, N.M., 4100 families can switch on their sets two evenings a week to a channel that runs a bingo game, with merchandise prizes offered to viewers playing along at home.

And in Liberal, Kan., the police can push a button in case of a town-wide emergency (say, an approaching tornado) and cut into every TV channel—and 12 of them, at that!—in 60 percent of the homes in town.

What these situations have in common is that they involve TV that you can't get by putting up an antenna. The pictures are piped into the receiving sets on wires. It's a service, already familiar to millions of Americans, known as community-antenna television, or CATV, or cable TV.

Technology, it appears, is about to take a remarkable backward step: TV, born on the air waves, seems destined to become a sort of visual telegraphy. The TV of the future, if we can believe quite a few knowledgeable people in the communications world, will be a form of phone-line service—one-way at first, later two-way.

It's all part of a fanciful expectation widely bruited about by the communications experts as a "wired-city concept." Truth is, it's already much more than a concept; it is a mushrooming service of such mind-boggling potential that a prominent veteran broadcaster, Roger Clipp of Philadelphia, predicted recently that "by 1985, using the most conservative figures, 46 million homes out of an estimated total of 70 million will be connected by wire to program-originating sources. For all practical purposes, most of the 800 or more TV transmitters (in the U.S.) can be padlocked."

Not surprisingly, such a prospect is giving the TV Establishment nightmares. Some observers even suspect that CBS's diversification into book publishing, toys, baseball and other fields reflects in part an awareness that TV's status quo is of numbered days. In any case, CBS itself is already in wired TV, too, being owner of the world's biggest community-antenna system, with over 100,000 subscribers, up in Vancouver, as well as having part interest in a San Francisco cable hookup.

WIRED FOR EVERYTHING

Late last month CBS disclosed that it was seeking to acquire full ownership of two groups of CATV systems now operating in California and Washington. NBC also is getting its feet wet in CATV, having five smallish systems scattered from upstate New York to California.

Individual broadcasters as a group are even more involved in this seeming wave of the TV Future. One-third of some 3,000,000 homes served by more than 2000 CATV systems are the customers of broadcaster-owned CATV operations.

Around for about 15 years, CATV once was looked upon as a handy contrivance for enabling people to get better pictures in hilly areas or to see distant stations they couldn't otherwise receive. As such, the broadcasters naturally welcomed its existence (little dreaming CATV could turn out to be that old boogeyman Pay TV in a new guise).

Nowadays, CATV entrepreneurs, who've discovered that "cable-casting" programs of their own, along with relaying over-the-air shows, gives their service a double-barreled attraction, squirm uneasily when asked if they aren't indeed in the Pay-TV business. Not until they start charging per-program fees instead of a flat monthly rate (usually $5 or $6), they insist, and they have no such plans as of now.

Still, a U.S. circuit court, in upholding the Federal Communications Commission's right to govern CATV last August, cautioned that "indiscriminate CATV development feeding upon the broadcast service is capable of destroying large parts of it."

Ironically, if CATV is on the way to putting broadcast TV out of business, it not only is biting the hand that feeds it, but devouring it entirely. Cable TV's bread-and-butter is the distribution of "studio quality" pictures from the on-air stations. Without them CATV would have nothing but its own programming to offer. This is not to say, of course, that a nation-wide network of cable systems might not some day become a market for programs which at present only the big TV networks can afford.

Indeed, just that kind of evolution is foreseen by some observers, who believe the ultimate prevailing system will be a combination of domestic satellites for long-distance program delivery and cable hookups for distributing shows locally.

Up to this point, CATV's impact is far more feared than real, its inroads on viewing being a long way from denting the Nielsen ratings.

Starting with such a feeble "public-service" gesture as televised time and weather reports, CATV operators went on to install rotating "bicycle wheels" displaying community bulletin-board announcements, and to transmit news (in printed form) and stock-ticker quotations. Today, more and more CATV'ers are venturing out with video cameras to cover local sports, school-board meetings and graduation exercises, and more and more are dabbling in studio-originated shows—kiddy entertainments, teen-talk sessions, game shows and the like.

Nothing elaborate yet, that is, but a few of the systems are beginning to show their own movies and—hang onto your hats!—to run commercials. →

Movies and commercials on CATV are what really throw a scare into a lot of people. In New York City, Manhattan Cable, franchised to serve the affluent midtown and East Side areas (including the Hotel Pierre), ran full-page newspaper ads last summer proclaiming plans to show uncut, uninterrupted movie "classics" twice nightly. The disclosure triggered howls of protest from movie exhibitors—in claimed defense of "free TV"—and forced a months-long postponement of the CATV movies while the city debated whether cable systems should be allowed to run their own entertainments.

Apparently only about 10 percent of the existing cable systems accept advertising, but prominent operators, such as Manhattan Cable's Charles Dolan and TelePrompTer's Irving Kahn (who has 20 systems scattered from New York City to Hawaii), want the right to air commercials even though they say they have no immediate intention of soliciting them.

The FCC, for its part, seems unable yet to make up its mind whether sales plugs should be verboten on CATV or not. Last summer the Federal agency told San Diego CATV systems they could originate programming to their hearts' content, but not with commercials. A few weeks later the FCC slapped down a complaint from North Carolina TV stations and ruled that a Greensboro cable system could indeed carry both its own programs and commercials.

Then, last month, the FCC threw nearly everybody into confusion, if not dismay, by suddenly slapping a complicated series of proposed curbs on CATV. One effect was virtually to bar cable systems from importing signals from distant stations until questions of copyright are resolved. These and other restrictions raised angry cries in some CATV quarters. Frederick W. Ford, president of the National Cable Television Association and himself a former FCC commissioner, charged the agency with trying to "eviscerate" the CATV industry. He also accused the FCC of "attempting to discredit" a Presidential task force on communications which had just urged a national policy of encouraging cable TV as the best means of diversifying the public's choice of programming.

Some CATV interests felt, however, that the regulations were not too severe to live with and, indeed, in one respect removed cable from the role of a supplemental medium relaying other people's programs and conferred on it an identity of its own. The FCC said it not only approved of CATV originating programs, but would expect cable systems to put something other than time-and-weather reports on at least one channel not used for relaying over-the-air programs. Industry sources had to agree that this was more like a spur than a halter.

It was clear, though, that legal battles lay ahead on many CATV fronts, with Congress certain to get into the scrap.

Three aspects basic to CATV give it its distinctly entrancing flavor: (1) unlike advertiser-supported broadcast TV, it is a medium directly subservient to its consumers; (2) whereas over-the-air TV is of necessity a mass medium and must cater to the broadest of tastes, CATV can be, is and will likely be highly local in its interests, even to catering to neighborhood needs; and (3) while over-the-air TV operates in a scarcity of signal space—each of the big networks, for instance, having but one channel to program—CATV has almost an embarrassment of channels available, usually 12 to 18, in the future easily 50 to 75! Which means, of course, CATV can serve a multiplicity of minority interests, community by community, which over-the-air TV could never dream of.

At this point, to be sure, CATV is pretty small-town and small-potatoes. One of its achievements has been to deliver TV to countless remote hamlets like Burns, Ore.; Moab, Utah; and Del Rio, Texas, which before had no TV at all. It frequently rewards small towns like these with more channels to watch than some major cities have: Tiny Thief Falls, Minn., for example, chooses from nine channels.

But big-time CATV also is on the move. New York City's two initial CATV systems typify what is in the wind:

In upper Manhattan, TelePrompTer is busy wiring up an area embracing the Harlem Negro and Puerto Rican ghettos. These are poor prospects for CATV service? Not so, says TPT's Irv Kahn. He points out that TV is the chief entertainment of the less affluent, who will sacrifice even some necessities for it. He is convinced they'll be eager CATV users, partly in this case because New York City has two Spanish-language UHF stations, hard to get over the air but picture-sharp on cable. Kahn pictures his uptown system as intent on strongly developing "people-to-people television," zeroed in on local concerns, another reason why the Harlem dwellers will buy the service.

Meanwhile, Manhattan Cable's enterprising "Chuck" Dolan has his eye on not one but two potential CATV gold mines: he is readying a 24-channel business-news service for corporate tenants of such office beehives as the Pan Am Building and Rockefeller Center; at the same time he is busily wiring up high-rise apartments and town-houses (11,000 by recent count) for piped-in programming which he hopes soon—given city blessing—will include not only movies, but live symphony concerts from Carnegie Hall and telecasts of Columbia University basketball games.

There are experts who feel such "exotic" CATV promises as facsimile newspapers, banking and computer services, meter-reading, police-fire protection and the like via cable are far, far down the pike.

Even so, a leading radio-TV journal stewed editorially the other day that CATV proponents seem to have few inhibitions. They're acting, sniffed Broadcasting magazine, as though "tomorrow's cable operator would combine the functions (and the ownership) of the Bell system, the television networks, the independent television stations, the motion-picture theaters and who knows what other enterprises."

It's a heady dream, all right. And a lot of cable-TV people are as sure as they're breathing that they've got a head start in the Great Gold Rush of the 1970's.

PHYSICIANS SPEED MEDICAL TREATMENT

Boston doctors
use television to answer
emergency calls

The problems of the lack of proper medical facilities at many major airports are becoming more and more manifest as our big airports become more and more crowded. At Boston's Logan field, people are beginning to do something about it. Under the aegis of Massachusetts General Hospital, officials have set up an experimental medical station, staffed by nurses, which is connected to a diagnostic room in the hospital via closed-circuit television. The patient at the airport is placed before a camera (left) and his image is carried to the hospital (below—in this case to Dr. Kenneth T. Bird, one of the founders of the system), where the doctors can control the camera and other equipment remotely. By watching the monitors—and with the aid of other information electronically sent—the diagnostician, virtually unaided by the nurse at the airport, receives his information and can make a speedy evaluation of the situation, thereby saving time and, perhaps, lives.

END

The surgeon's patient lay close to death on the sea floor off Assumption Reef. His name: Ulysses. Diagnosis: canvas bag in belly. History: Ulysses, a 60-pound grouper, in a mutual love-at-first-sight relationship with diver Jacques-Yves Cousteau, had dogged the famed explorer for weeks—cherishing Cousteau's caresses as much as the morsels of meat he was hand-fed daily. But one day Ulysses, often unwise in his consumption, gobbled his rations bag and all. Since Cousteau could not bring Ulysses up to surgery, surgery would go down to Ulysses. As house calls go, the doc had a beaut on his hands.

The tale of brave Ulysses tells us much about Jacques-Yves Cousteau, the restlessly creative oceanographer-cinematographer who, since he co-invented the Aqua-Lung in 1943, has given mankind film glimpses of oceanic life bordering on the undreamable. He holds the personal creative honor award of Cannes (with Disney and Chaplin) and three of his pictures, "The Silent World," "The Living Sea" and "World Without Sun" have won Academy Awards. His television specials—currently it's ABC's The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau series (the season's third show, "The Unexpected Voyage of Pepito and Cristobal," will be on this week)—have won lavish praise. Wrote one critic: "Cousteau's colors are as rich as the palette of Pierre Bonnard. He has opened the ocean's depths to man—and man is in awe."

No more in awe than Cousteau, who for three decades has been witness to what he calls "the bedazzling, stupefying wonders" of the sea. Born into a middle-class French family in St. André de-Cubzac, near Bordeaux in 1910, Cousteau remembers "an interest in the sea since childhood." "One does not have to live near the sea to love it," Cousteau says. "Once one has seen a ship, it is not necessary to see it every day. One doesn't forget."

Cousteau never did. Much to his mother's objection ("Women hate the sea," he says) and his father's indifference (he was a globe-trotting lawyer and "very seldom at home"), Cousteau, at age 20, entered the naval academy at Brest (France's Annapolis). But it wasn't until 1936, when Cousteau first waded into the Mediterranean and gaped at the sea through Fernez goggles, that his interest in things oceanic was really sparked. He wrote: "Sometimes we are lucky enough to know that our lives have been changed, to discard the old, embrace the new and run headlong down an immutable course. It happened to me when my eyes were opened on the sea."

Cousteau's undersea career was crystalized by World War II. In 1940, while a gunnery officer stationed at the coastal fort of Toulon, Cousteau was summoned to Marseilles for special naval duty with the Resistance. He balked at first. "To me," he says, "intelligence was a school of lying and cheating, everything I detest." Finally he consented, at his superior's insistence. Today Cousteau will not discuss his underground activities ("I am waiting for one or two more to die," he says mysteriously, "then I will write a book"). His services were, however, heroic enough to win him the Legion of Honor.

During the war Cousteau used diving experiments ("It was the only license the Nazis would issue me") as a cover to his intelligence work. And while the Germans were desperately trying to develop frogman equipment of their own, Cousteau perfected his Aqua-Lung under their very noses. His undersea achievements continued after at work on a 12-man submarine of amazing flexibility and comfort.

Cousteau has also made major progress in advancing undersea color photography. His 70-pound Bathygraf cine-camera and the invention of the Deep-sea Camera Sled have permitted him to film incredible phenomena miles down.

In addition, Mr. Cousteau—whom one almost feels like calling Leonardo—is an expert in marine biology, botany and ecology. Since 1944, when Cousteau established the Group for Undersea Research (subsidized by the French Government), his record of underwater discoveries is remarkable: he has excavated a wine ship sunk in the Third Century B.C. (Cousteau sipped some of the war. Although he is not himself a scientist ("I hold no degree"), Cousteau's contributions to oceanic technology are most impressive. He developed a one-man, jet-propelled submarine; Conshelf I, II and III (history's first undersea colonies to be manned by humans); and is currently the stuff and reported it good); he has revealed living creatures at the astonishing depth of 24,600 feet; and he has encountered a "truckfish" which unaccountably had grown to 50 times its normal size. For his impressive contributions to human knowledge, Cousteau is the sole nonscientist appointed → to the National Academy of Science. He also holds the rank of Capitaine de Corvette in the French Navy, entitling him to command any ship in the French fleet.

A great many qualities are needed to have accomplished all this—intelligence, curiosity, discipline. But courage is crucial. Indeed, courage could well be Cousteau's middle name. Apart from the "everyday" hazards of his work, he has "danced" with an octopus and taken care of a vicious shark by unceremoniously bopping him in the snoot. (Except for sharks, Cousteau has encountered little hostile life underwater. "Sea monsters," he says, "are myths created by writers and journalists.")

Further, he has made an audacious 50-fathom dive into the zone of rapture, where divers act like drunken gods; has plunged nearly naked into pressures that have buckled submarines; and once made a fantastic 396-foot dive that took the life of his brave companion. "It is times like that," Cousteau says, "that one wants to give the whole thing up—go out and sell shoes." On his own count he has broken 22 bones in his lifetime—amazingly, 14 of them were cracked above water in car crashes. French drivers, one infers, breathe easier when Cousteau is underwater. Cousteau minimizes his courageous feats: "A great deal of work goes into reducing the risk. On paper, it is foolproof. I'd call myself a reasonable adventurer."

Among the significant by-products of all this scientific achievement are the films Cousteau produces—the reason Cousteau is a household word in many an American home. In all, Cousteau has turned out seven theatrical films. His first, "Epaves," a pictorial essay on sunken ships, was made in 1941 (released in 1945). This was followed by two features, "The Silent World" and "World Without Sun" as well as 12 short films. "I wish in my films," he says, "to illustrate the incredible wonders of nature. When man interferes with nature, it is a catastrophe. He disturbs, pollutes, destroys. We have to fight this with all the strength we have. Otherwise we will be left with a pile of destroyed earth.

"Regulation is not the answer," Cousteau continues. "Education is. I hope to educate—bring about change through television. I am constantly fighting the urge to end each program with a little speech to make clear the meaning of what they have seen. But I don't want to be intolerable. I want to entertain. I am not out to preach or bedazzle." But bedazzle he does—wrapping the viewer's senses in a wonderland aflame with exquisite colors and forms. Cousteau captures the sea in all its awesome scope, its unbelievable abundance of life, its mysteries, its hazards and, ultimately, its supreme serenity.

One would think Jacques Cousteau is a benign, joyous man. But—at least on land—he isn't. He is a tense, bone-thin man, all bulbous eyes that peer out above a falcon's beak of a nose, with a queer, acid-idealistic anger at a great many things. Here are some of his critical opinions—all expressed in a precise, positive, whiplash manner.

On truth: "Truth is everything. But how difficult it is to speak the truth to one's children, to one's wife, to one's friends. We are lying all the time. But there is no need to lie in nature."

On money: "I have absolutely no interest in material things. Money is a dirty necessity. I hate it. . . . I have no desire to have a big car, a home with a swimming pool. I do not want to forget the harshness of life. I do not want to forget what it is to sleep in a cold hut. . . . I have seen →

Taste that beats the others cold!

men decay with success. They become absolutely corrupt. I have seen them. I know. . . . I know many of the world's richest men. They are the dirtiest of pigs. Totally dishonest. They were human beings when they were poor, but they have forgotten."

Civilization: "Civilization is degenerating. We have become stereotypes. We are all put into categories, forced into molds. . . . I am bored with the Negro problem as I was with the Jewish problem after the war. They are of vital interest to those concerned, of course, but they are merely ripples in the global sense. . . . Everyone is dissatisfied. The Communists, the Capitalists, the youth. Everyone is being kept in a pressure cooker and that cooker will explode."

On science: "Much too much emphasis is placed on science. Unless a scientist is also a humanist, he can have no idea—no vision—of what his own discovery means. . . . Poets and philosophers should search through a scientist's garbage. They would doubtless find discoveries that would spark new life."

He's actually quite an angry man. And one is almost inclined to suspect that he prefers animals and fish to human beings. One of his more curious fantasies seems to bear this out: "I wish someday to put contact lenses on bulls. I believe they are near-sighted from bending to eat grass. Equipped with contact lenses, we would see if the matador would win!"

All in all, he's a fascinating man and undoubtedly a genius. Perhaps the real key to his character is to be found in this final comment. Says he: "I am terrorized by the shortness of life. I always have been. I am so curious and there is so much more of life I want to see. It is an endless race against death."

Did Hartford Pay TV Really Pay?

The country's sole Pay TV system, operated experimentally in Hartford, Conn., since 1962, will be shut down Jan. 31. RKO General Inc., which poured millions of dollars into the test, insists it proved subscription TV "can be a worth-while supplement" to the free kind. Plainly, though, the Hartford project was no roaring success. It was handicapped because it could not offer programs in color. Also it had increasing difficulty booking movies and sports events, the biggest box-office draws, because these were snapped up by the free-broadcast outlets. Ironically, the Federal Communications Commission only last month unaccountably gave a highly belated green light to nation-wide Pay TV—effective in six months. One guess why: the FCC, tired of Congressional hauling and tugging on the subject, wanted to make it possible to find out once and for all whether anybody wants Pay TV or not.

A long-cherished dream is about to be realized by the people who measure the size of television audiences: A. C. Nielsen Co., the leading survey organization, will begin delivering "instantaneous" nation-wide ratings January 1970. Actually, networkers and sponsors and their ad agencies will regularly get their TV-program readings on the morning-after, about the time they get to work. But, on order, Nielsen will be able to dish up his fateful ratings the same night. This will be achieved by removing the "Audimeters" (which record viewing information on tape) from Nielsen's 1200-odd sample homes and linking each home by direct line to the research firm's computerized data center in Chicago. "It will probably mean quicker program cancellation decisions," one not-overjoyed networker sighed. "TV will never be quite the same again." Presently Nielsen subscribers have to wait a week or two for the nose counts.

Hal Humphrey, 56, one of TV's most relentless critics, died Dec. 29. His Los Angeles Times column was syndicated to dozens of newspapers. "It wouldn't be fair to say Hal was many people's favorite in the TV business," a high-rank network acquaintance of Humphrey's said of him, "but he was a bright, civilized guy most of us liked personally."

Apparently ABC hasn't decided yet which of its evening shows shall be lopped off to make room for Dick Cavett's new three-a-week series beginning in May. But the larger question on which TV circles are speculating is whether this money-saving campaign stands much chance of succeeding. ABC probably will save $4,000,000 by dropping Cavett's low-rated morning show (leaving local stations to fill the time) and thinks his critically acclaimed talents will fare better in the evening hours, besides offering relatively low-cost programming. Cavett's problem: no star yet has carried three prime-time hours weekly.

MONDAY FOOTBALL

I'm for Pete Rozelle ["As We See It," Nov. 23]. I'm one lady who would much rather have 14 more pro-football games on Monday nights. There's a lot more excitement on the 10-yard line than in the Long Branch Saloon.

Terry Dickman

Acme, Wash.

You have finally put your finger on the person responsible for the decline and fall of American family life —Mr. Pete Rozelle.

Mrs. James Solon

Huron, S.D.

Out of the many hours of major network programming of dull soap operas, quiz shows and whodunits every week, the ladies have the nerve to criticize their breadwinner's watching a few hours of weekend sports.

Clifton M. Brooks Jr.

Ayer, Mass.

I never did find out why people could sit glued to a TV set, watching grown men battling over a silly football. Murder? Kill?

Allen Moline
Rolette, N.D.

ABOUT LOVE

Your Dec. 14 "As We See It" says, "Love is nice. It might even replace violence in popularity some day." That day could be now if it weren't for the censors. Human love is a beautiful thing. But by the censors' definition, it is obscene and shouldn't be allowed on TV, lest it warp the minds of the young. Violence, on the other hand, is an acceptable, everyday occurrence that teaches children life's reality.

Paul Fuller

Montebello, Cal.

I agree with you and the widow in Felton, Cal., that romance is much needed in TV, but your later accent on young love misses the point. Romeo was a youth, true, but Robert Browning was no teenybopper when he swept a mature Elizabeth Barrett off to Italy.

Elizabeth L. Dawson

IT'S NEW-KLEE-AR

When top TV stars, comedians, reporters and commentators, including an ex-President, pronounce "nuclear" as if it were spelled "new killer," it's a little too much.

SERIES IDEA

Want to make this or any other TV season a little better? Send each of the major networks a copy of "Don Quixote" by Miguel de Cervantes. It would make a hit series.

Your Dec. 17 listing for N.Y.P.D. describing Carlos Montalban as Colombian coffee's "El Exigente" is incorrect. "El Exigente" is associated with Savarin coffee, a product of the S.A. Schonbrunn & Company, not Colombian coffee.

beyond his present age level...even

Prove it to yourself...with this 10 day free trial!

Reading is fun for Sarah—as it should be for every child.

At age four and a half, she's already choosing her own books (on her own library card) at the Berkeley, California library.

She reads (and understands) books many third graders find "hard going." Yet she won't enter first grade for another year.

Sarah is typical of thousands of children who learned to read (or improved their reading skills) with a simple inexpensive Phonics Reading Kit that actually makes reading fun.

Listen and Learn with Phonics was developed by a reading expert. It has been endorsed, after extensive testing by teachers, schools, and educators.

This practical (and inexpensive) home-learning kit fascinates eager young minds from three to ten. The child hears the letters or sounds on the phonograph record, sees them in his book and repeats them himself. This makes an absorbing game of better reading, better spelling—with amazing results!

Six Teaching Games Included FREE with Each Listen and Learn Phonics Set

These "Learning Tools" are simple to use! You don't need special teaching skills to use this program. Nor do you need any special knowledge of phonics.

In fact, your child needs no special supervision on your part. This "Listen and Learn" set is so simple, so fascinating, he can learn "on his own" without help (and without promptings).

Teachers and parents acclaim results

"I received your Combination Teaching Set and am positively delighted with it! . . . your marvelous approach to reading is just what we need." Mrs. Rogacian, Cent. High School, Snyder, N.Y.

"We purchased 'Listen and Learn with Phonics'. . . for our nine year old son . . . within two weeks his reading had improved 100%." Mrs. Gregory Knight, San Leandro, Calif.

This is the "Listen and Learn With Phonics" set including records, booklets and materials for playing learning games.

10-Day FREE Trial— Plus a 4-Month Money-Back Guarantee!

Results are so dramatic, the publishers will make the complete kit available with an equally dramatic FREE trial and guarantee.

You can test the kit free for ten days. Then use the kit for four months and return it for full refund if you're not convinced it is worth many times its modest cost.

See for yourself how fast your child can learn to read. Just fill out and mail the coupon below. There's no obligation, and six teaching games are included free—yours to keep whether you buy or not. In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

A trio of serious dramas gives this week some distinction even though four bits of escapist fluff-and-nonsense throw it off balance.

Two of the dramas—"Birdman of Alcatraz" and "The Miracle Worker"—are being shown for the third time on television. The third, "Compulsion," is having its television premiere. This 1959 film based on the Leopold-Loeb case is a taut and tense movie, part psychological thriller in its unsensationalized account of the cold-blooded murder of a youngster by two young men, and part impassioned plea against capital punishment. Bradford Dillman and Dean Stockwell give remarkable performances as the perpetrators of the "crime of the century" and Orson Welles is simply unforgettable as their Darrowesque defense attorney.

"Birdman," last aired in 1965, won Burt Lancaster an Oscar nomination in 1962 for his portrait of the two-time murderer who devoted his years in solitary confinement to ornithology and scientific research. More important, it is an impressive depiction of the despair and inhumanity of imprisonment, thanks to John Frankenheimer's direction. "The Miracle Worker," last telecast in 1965, is noteworthy for the 1962 Oscar-winner performances of Anne Bancroft and Patty Duke as Annie Sullivan and her blind and deaf pupil, Helen Keller.

"Zulu" is for the kids and the amnesiacs—or at least for those whose idea of movie fun consists of watching 4000 Zulus attack 140 British soldiers until they—the Zulus, of course—are beaten, with time out from the slaughter and blood for every cliche of the thin-red-line theirs-not-to-reason-why besieged garrison school of screenwriting. The rest of us had best cherish those four feather and fond recollections of all the pukka sahib screen fare of the past. Even so, "Zulu's" not quite as silly as "King's Pirate," a 1967 remake of that swashbuckling 1952 "Against All Flags." Need we say more than that a chap named Doug McClure tries to buckle the swash the way Errol Flynn did earlier—and comes awash.

With more serious pretensions, there's "Man in the Middle," a simple-minded saga that mixes psychiatry, race relations and aphorisms to no obvious purpose. Keenan Wynn, as a psychopathic American soldier in India circa 1945 on trial for murdering a British soldier, gets a chance to writhe and scream but the other actors are forced to bear their roles without even a grin. Robert Mitchum, of course, keeps his eyes at half mast. "4 for Texas" is intended as a spoof of the true-blue badmen-gamblers and heart-of-gold-and-chest-of-astonishing-dimensions girls of the Texas frontier but it's all sleepy time in Galveston, even for Frank Sinatra and Dean Martin. The major laughs come from the Three Stooges doing an ancient routine and an old lady falling out of her wheelchair. Zowie.

Jets. A heart-stopping 27-23 win over Oakland brought superstardom and the long-awaited league title to New York. AFL Player of the Year Joe Namath passed less but won more in '68. The receivers are led by George Sauer (66 catches for second in the league), Don Maynard (all-time pro yardage leader) and tough Pete Lammons. The running game gets straight-ahead power from Matt Snell (sixth in the league) and fancy stepping from Emerson Boozer. Aggressive pass rushers Gerry Philbin and Verlon Biggs are stand-outs on the fine defensive unit.

Colts. Earl Morrall starred as the Cinderella quarterback, leading the league in passing and winning the MVP award as the Colts marched to the title. Top receivers are tough John Mackey and fleet Willie Richardson. Tom Matte, a tenacious, hard-bitten runner (10th in the league), leads the ground game. The defense is stubborn and stingier than Scrooge. Teamwork was the word as the defense turned in three regular-season shutouts, and then picked up another one in the NFL championship game, handing the Browns their first shutout in 143 games.

British director Peter Brook ("Marat/Sade") introduces the Polish Laboratory Theatre's production of "Akropolis," performed in Polish. Originally a 1904 paean to the glory of Poland, the play has been transformed by director Jerzy Grotowski into an apocalyptic vision of human destiny that depicts the Auschwitz death camp as the Acropolis of Western civilization. The Polish troupe, hailed by drama critic Walter Kerr as "the world's most influential avant-garde acting company," was to have visited the U.S. this winter, but the trip was canceled after the invasion of Czechoslovakia. (Two hours)

If "PBL" runs only 90 minutes, the program will be followed by a performance by the Robert Joffrey Ballet.

The Unexpected Voyage of Pepito and Cristobal

SPECIAL COLOR Two young Cape fur seals leave the Cape of Good Hope with the Calypso on a voyage to the Caribbean.

Named Pepito and Cristobal by the crew, the seals (not sea lions, which have external ears) were brought aboard for an experiment. Captain Cousteau wanted to know if seals might become as friendly and domesticated as dogs, cats and other mammals.

Pepito and Cristobal begin the voyage as 14-month-old, 65-pound pups. When full grown, they'll dive as deep as 1200 feet, swim at 15 mph and weigh in at 600 pounds. Helping them grow are the crew members, who hand out liberal portions of mackerel, mullet and octopus. (Small wonder that Zoom, the ship's bloodhound mascot, is a bit jealous.)

The seals live in tanks aboard ship, occasionally joined by divers Albert Falco and Raymond Coll. In the sea, they are kept on leashes, which are removed after they become used to their masters.

In the Caribbean, the seals' distinctly different personalities are best expressed. Cristobal, always fiercely independent, swims off and disappears. The almost docile Pepito, on the other hand, does his own thing while the divers examine cannons from a sunken Spanish galleon. Wearing a pouch around his neck, Pepito collects the divers' coral specimens—then swims to the surface and clammers up the ship's ladder to deliver his cargo.

Captain Cousteau and Rod Serling are the narrators. (60 min.)

Bob Hope, as all of us know, is more than just a mere comedian. He is a great American institution. Like the Bank of America.

Hope is quite upset about all the recent publicity regarding his wealth. He is worth anywhere from $150,000,-000 to $500,000,000, depending upon which magazine you read.

Fortune, most prestigious in such matters, puts Bob up among the 50 richest men in the United States. There, in the cozy category of $150,000,000 - $200,-000,000, sits the one-time Cleveland lightweight who fought under the name of Packy (Canvasback) East until some boxer skied his nose.

There he is, among the Rockefellers, the Fords and the Mellons. He is the only show-business entry in the top-50 list, unless one counts Howard Hughes, who only dabbles in show-business properties—like trying to buy a TV network or the city of Las Vegas.

Time magazine, a publishing sister of Fortune, is even more exuberant in its estimate of Hope's green power. Time says Hope is worth $500,000,000. "I think their computer drinks," quips Bob.

Bob Hope and his $150,000,000 bankroll

How the comedian turned jokes and shrewd investments into one of America's largest fortunes

"Five hundred million dollars? I wish my writers were that funny!"

What bugs Hope is the fact that none of the magazines, before publishing their estimates, asked Bob how much he was worth. I did. "If I sold my land today," he says, "I'd be worth $100,-000,000—a dollar more, a dollar less."

Significantly, he didn't say how much he would be worth if he sold the land next year. At the current zoom in the California real-estate boom, the Hope spread, mostly in the San Fernando Valley, some believe should be worth $200,000,000 in a year or two.

Also, he didn't say how much his stocks, oil wells in Texas, radio station in Puerto Rico, pieces of Los Angeles Rams, Cleveland Indians, movie and TV enterprises would bring.

Let's say, to avoid quibbling over a few hundred million, that the $150,-000,000-$200,000,000 category fits him nicely.

Bob fights his new wealth image with the best weapon a comedian has—jokes: "Dolores is home cutting up all the mattresses looking for my money. She says the kitchen needs painting." Or: "Time and Fortune got it all wrong. I'm a TV comedian, not a TV repairman."

And the other comedians have a new topic for laughs. Says Milton Berle: "I always knew Bob was rich. I once saw him walking down the Los Angeles River singing 'This Land Is My Land.'" And Zsa Zsa Gabor: "Where have I failed?"

Hope is probably the first man in history who is upset at his own good fortune. He has good reason. First off, he has suddenly discovered 400 new relatives. Second, he fears that the public may not laugh as hard at a rich man. Whoever heard of J. Paul Getty getting a yock from the balcony?

And how about that trunkful of jokes about Bing Crosby's wealth? Hope should be sending CARE packages to Bing. Crosby says Hope's fortune is no secret to him. "The only reason Bob ever made those 'Road' pictures with me was just as an excuse to look over property on company time."

And Jack Oakie, a Hope pal from the old days at Paramount, gives an insight into Hope's wizardry on the stock market. "Bob bought American Tel and Tel when it was known as American Smoke Signals," says Oakie.

Surprisingly, Hope's solitary show-business inclusion in the top-50 list caused more of an uproar in Hollywood than it did elsewhere in the country.

Most people thought the wealthiest guy in town was Jack L. Warner, the studio tycoon who is a poor runnerup at $75,000,000. Or Fred MacMurray, who doesn't have the first dollar he ever earned—he bought a pocketbook with that—but he has the second. Or Rudy Vallee, who has been known to stop a stranger on the street and ask for change for a nickel—Rudy puts his two cents' worth, no more, in the parking meter.

One famous producer who lives in Bel-Air commented at Hope's name on the list. "Why, Bob doesn't even drive a Rolls! Worse, he lives in the Valley!"

The producer could have added that Hope not only lives in the San Fernando Valley, he owns a good part of it.

As Bob and I sat in his Toluca Lake estate, I pointed out the window to a huge mountain which separates Hollywood from Burbank. It was covered with nothing but trees and brush. I asked Bob if it were true that he owned the mountain. "No," said Bob, calmly. "I own that one over there." He pointed to one smaller but populated with homes instead of brush. That figured.

The Hope home is one of the most magnificent in any part of Los Angeles. Six acres of beautifully landscaped grounds with its own golf hole, it is a comfortable estate.

It's the first house he has ever owned. And it cost—in 1938—with even more land than it has today, just $28,000. Wings have been added, and it has been redecorated. But it's still basi--→ cally the same property it was in 1938—and you couldn't touch it for under a million today.

There you have the tip-off on how a fast-talking comedian can outdistance tycoons in making money.

Hope thought the $28,000 price was too high 31 years ago, when he came out here from Broadway to do his first movie, "The Big Broadcast of 1938." "I also thought 'Thanks for the Memory' was a lousy song," he says. "They wanted me to sing it to Shirley Ross in the movie."

When Bob landed here in the Thirties, he was a successful Broadway comedian with $100,000 in cash. He also had a friend by the name of Joe Rosenberg with Lehman Bros. on Wall Street. Rosenberg advised Hope to invest his cash in land.

"My first impulse," Hope recalled, "was to put it in the stock market. I would have been twice as rich today." And then he added—and this will give you an idea of how much land he owns—"I wouldn't have to come up with that $500,000 a year in property taxes I give to Los Angeles County each year."

The property-tax rate is less than three cents on the dollar of assessed—not market—value. The market-value figures are staggering. Assessed value usually is 25 percent of market value.

Bob's first land purchase in 1938 was some acreage near his beloved Lakeside Country Club. It cost $18,000, and for 25 years Bob operated it successfully as a golf driving range. Then the huge Music Corporation of America bought Universal Pictures and wanted to expand. Jules Stein, chairman of the board, wrote out a check for $1,000,000 and handed it to Bob. Hope had noticed that the land adjoined Universal when he bought it.

Hope started buying more San Fernando Valley real estate. In those days the Valley was mostly bean fields you could pick up for $30 an acre. Today it's Encino, Sherman Oaks, Woodland Hills, Northridge—home and shopping area for a million people, more than there are in Bob's home town of Cleveland, Ohio.

"I had to buy half the San Fernando Valley," says Hope, "to get Crosby's horses out from under my window. Five more acres and I'll have my own foreign policy."

Along the way there were other buys, notably oil wells in west Texas. "I hadn't seen so much oil since I borrowed George Raft's comb," was Hope's comment on his first gusher.

And Palm Springs! It's Hope's second home, and by the end of next year it may be his first. He's building a home there on top of Southridge that will be the ultimate show place of that millionaires' oasis, already dotted with some homes that start at a million and go up to five million. The Hope home, complete with guest house, will occupy 37,000 square feet of land atop a mountain overlooking all of Palm Springs. "I think Dolores and I will spend a lot of time there," he said as we strolled over his Toluca Lake estate. "But I hate to give this up. It's so damn comfortable."

The Hope home in Toluca Lake probably will go to some charitable or church group. A private citizen would have to be in Hope's bracket to afford the taxes.

While other movie people back in the Thirties looked at Palm Desert as a locale for sandals-and-sand epics starring Maria Montez and Jon Hall, Bob looked at all that sand and envisioned golf courses. So he bought it as an investment. Even Bob couldn't foresee that Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, our greatest golfing President, would pick Palm Desert as his winter home and transform it, along with adjacent Palm Springs, into the golfing capital of the world.

No wonder the pros converge there in February for the Bob Hope Desert Classic. It used to be called the Palm Springs Desert Classic until someone discovered whose land they were playing on.

But the land buy Bob considers his most spectacular didn't come before World War II. It came in 1949, when he picked up 2600 acres of the most scenic ranch land in Southern California, in Malibu Canyon. In 1949 I looked at some of this land, too. I could have bought it for $300 an acre. I didn't. And that explains why I'm the writer and Hope is the subject of this article.

Recently, Los Angeles papers headlined a charge made by Bryan W. Stevens, a San Marino high school teacher who delights in waging war on Los Angeles County assessment practices. Stevens contended that Hope's Malibu Canyon acreage was on the assessment rolls at $7,500,000 market value, whereas, in actuality, a purchaser had offered him $34,000,000 for the acreage.

Stevens' charges attracted more than passing interest because only months before, he had taken on Gov. Ronald Reagan with similar charges about some land the actor-politician owned in the same area.

Hope's comment is this: "I wish Stevens would give me the name of the guy who wants to buy at that price. He's got it." At $34,000,000, the acreage breaks down to about $131,000 an acre. This is pretty steep, unless someone knows about an oil pool under the land.

I checked out the spread myself. Located on Las Virgenes Road on the San Fernando Valley side of Malibu Canyon, it is everyman's dream of a ranch setting. Verdant, rolling hills set against a mountainous canyon. Movie and TV companies have used the area for years as a location for Westerns. When you thought Ward Bond was leading his Wagon Train through Colorado, he actually was driving over Hope's land.

Clocking myself, I needed only 10 minutes to get by car to a new subdivision in a canyon not nearly so spectacular as Hope's. There I found $75,-000-to-$100,000 homes on tract-sized lots, three to five homes an acre. Suddenly, I realized a subdivider could make a tidy profit even by paying $131,-000 an acre.

One thing seems certain. Five years from now, the Hope ranch will be a steal at $34,000,000. For then the new Whitnall Freeway, already on the boards, will speed motorists from the hot San Fernando Valley through Malibu Canyon to the cool Pacific Ocean. The Hope property will be right alongside the new freeway.

Just this past July, the new Simi Valley Freeway cut over the rocky mountains where once Hopalong Cassidy chased rustlers. It connects the San Fernando and Simi Valleys. Already real-estate developers are proclaiming that the Simi Valley will be the San Fernando Valley of the Seventies.

As you travel over the huge new freeway dropping down into the Simi Valley, you spy a famous movie ranch called Corriganville, which old-time Western actor Crash Corrigan first developed. But Crash sold out some years ago to Hope, who also bought an adjoining ranch—3800 acres in all.

Recently, the Los Angeles papers carried stories of big land purchases at Rancho California in Riverside County. Governor Reagan bought a big spread; so did Rudy Vallee, Art Linkletter and a lot of other well-heeled Hollywood land investors. As they drove up to their purchases in this new boom area, they couldn't help but notice a big horse ranch at Perris, Cal., in the same area. This ranch, which looks as though it should be owned by a Sonny Whitney or another Vanderbilt is, of course, owned by Bob Hope. He bought it, naturally, years ago when the price was much lower than what Reagan, Linkletter, Vallee, et al., paid for their land. Riverside County adjoins Los Angeles County to the South and East and →

is within 100 miles of downtown Los Angeles. Land values are high. Palm Springs, for instance, is in Riverside County.

One would surmise that Hope is surrounded by a battery of smart financial men who order, "Buy!"; and that Hope does what they say without giving it a second thought, then moves on to the next gag. You couldn't be more wrong.

Bob Hope, who wants to be remembered for his laughs, actually is a financial genius. His longtime agent, the late Louis (Doc) Shurr, said Hope had a computer brain long before the word was ever heard of at IBM. "He could add up columns of figures in his head with the accuracy of a CPA," Doc once said.

And one of Bob's financial and legal people says: "I have never known anyone with Bob's knack for picking up a piece of land that looks worthless and is priced the same way. Bob will buy, often against our concerted advice, and hold on to it. Soon, a freeway or some other economic boom will increase its value a thousandfold."

One shudders to think how rich Hope would be today if he didn't allot 90 percent of his time performing at non-paying benefits. He was in Vietnam as usual this Christmas—especially this Christmas, because his youngest son, Kelly, is there as one of Uncle Sam's men in uniform. "Of course," said Bob, after the magazine pieces publicizing his wealth were published, "if you believe Time magazine, I won't go to Vietnam. I'll just send for it." (Hope's annual Christmas special, recounting that Vietnam visit, will be on the air this Thursday, Jan. 16.)

The Hopes, despite all that money, don't live lavishly, by movie-star standards. He doesn't own a Rolls-Royce, the Bel-Air status symbol, though his choice of cars is dictated by other considerations—he drives a Chrysler, provided for him free by his TV sponsor. "It's the best car on the road until next June," says Bob.

Sometimes you will see Bob's picture in a national magazine endorsing a brand-name carpet or paint or kitchen equipment. You can bet the Toluca Lake estate needed redecorating.

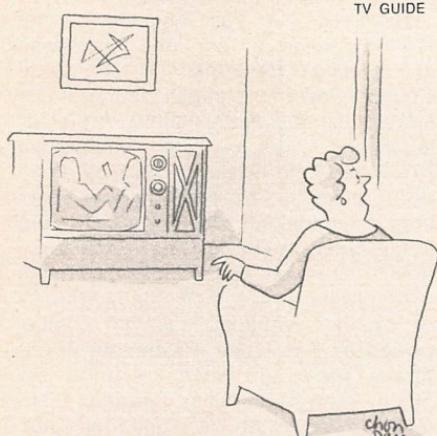

Even Hope's golf equipment comes free, including balls that are stamped: "Thanks for the Memory."

Manufacturers stand in line to get Hope to endorse their products. He would be some kind of a nut if he went out and paid for carpet that he could get free by just spending 15 minutes with a photographer.

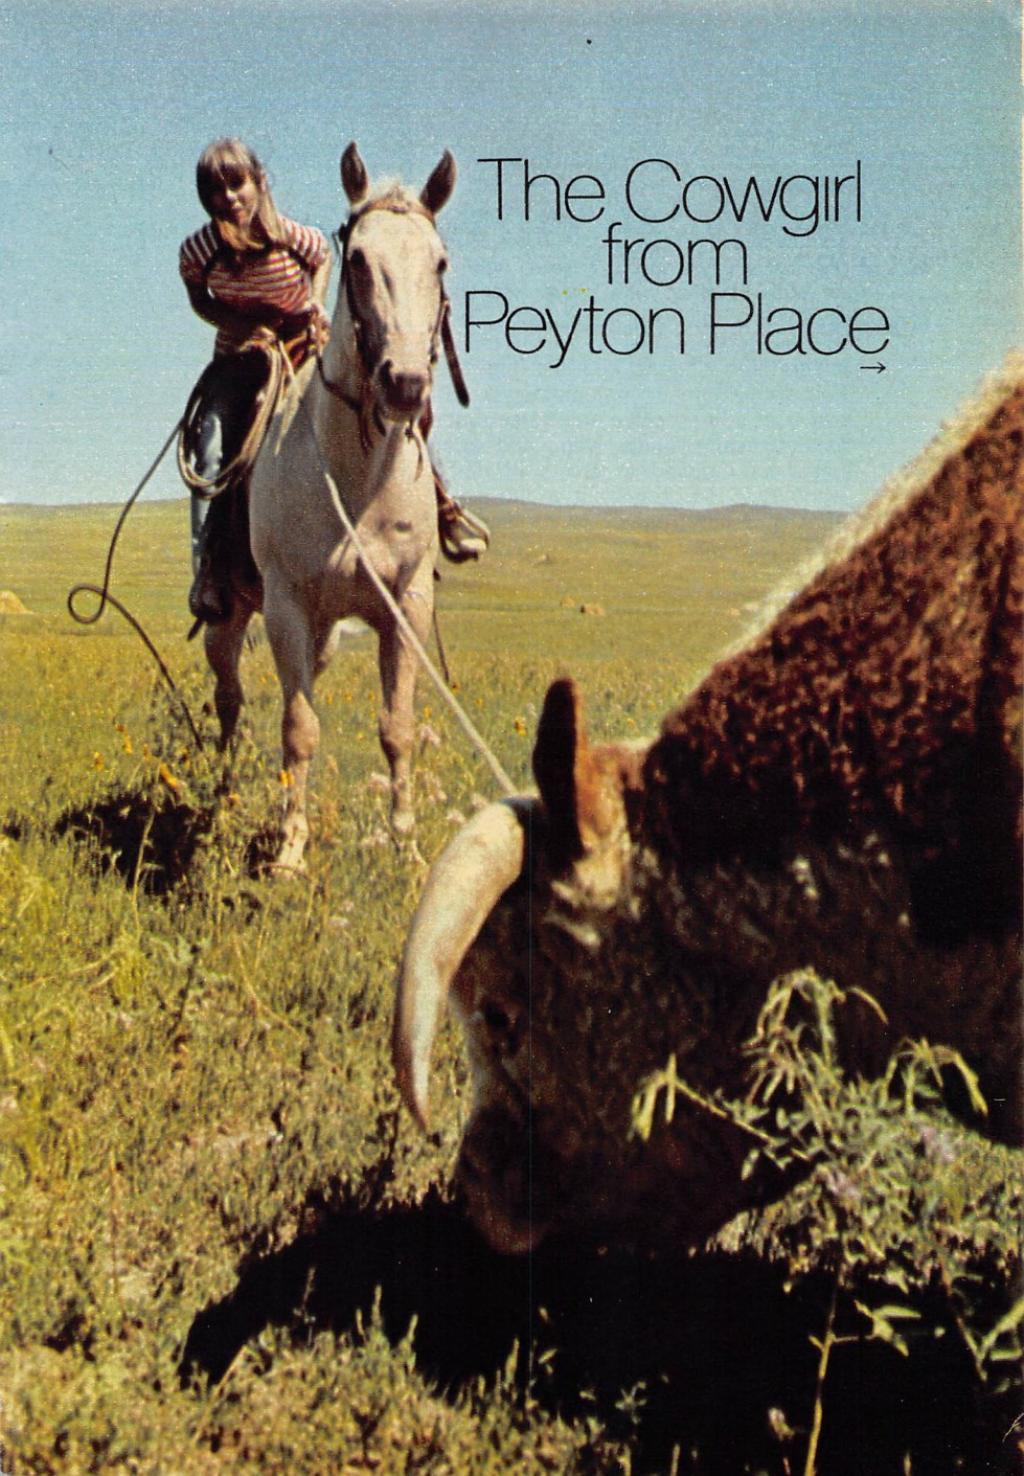

My favorite Hope ad is the one, for those traveler's checks, which proclaims: "I never carry more than $50 in cash on my person." With all those land deeds in his pocket, who has room for cash?

I spent several days with Hope and Jackie Gleason over at Lakeside, where they were shooting scenes for a movie starring the two. Bob, old enough now to be eligible for Medicare, bounced out of a golf cart to do a scene with a chimp. He looked trim, and behaved like the Hope of old. Gleason commented: "Hope looks great—for a guy who has 150 million bucks."

'Come quickly, Ed. Here's that TV commercial that makes you sick.'

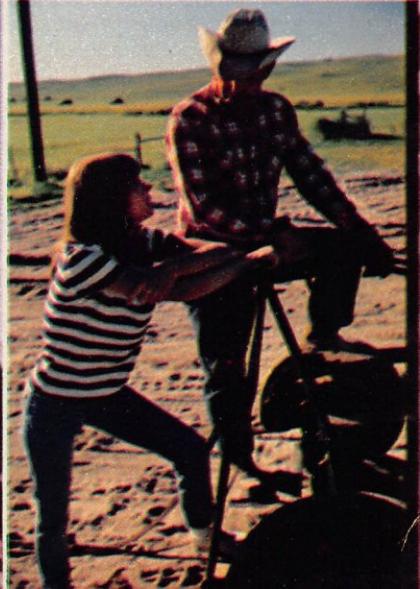

A color photograph of a woman with blonde hair, wearing a striped shirt and jeans, riding a light-colored horse. She is holding a lasso and appears to be herding cattle. In the foreground, the dark, textured back of a cow is visible. The scene is set in a green, open field under a clear blue sky.

As any devotee knows, Peyton Place is somewhere in New England. But Pat Morrow is anything but a New Englander. Miss Morrow, who plays Rita Harrington on "the continuing story," is a Western girl who has an affinity for the wider open spaces and the big sky. Fortunately for her, her mother is part owner of a large cattle and horse ranch located near Hyannis, Neb.; and when Pat's not required to emote in Hollywood, she likes to get out on the plains and do a little riding and roping. And that's just what she's doing on these pages—riding and roping. On page 25 she's on a horse named Billy, and her rope is on a steer (she later gave said steer a shot of penicillin to cure a hoof infection). At right, Pat helps herd horses so that the hired hands can lasso them, and directly below we see her preparing to herd the cattle, seen in the background, to the water so that they can drink. (Cattle apparently aren't very bright.) Below, at far right, is Pat talking to Harvey Evans, the ranch foreman. All in all, Peyton Place it's not. END

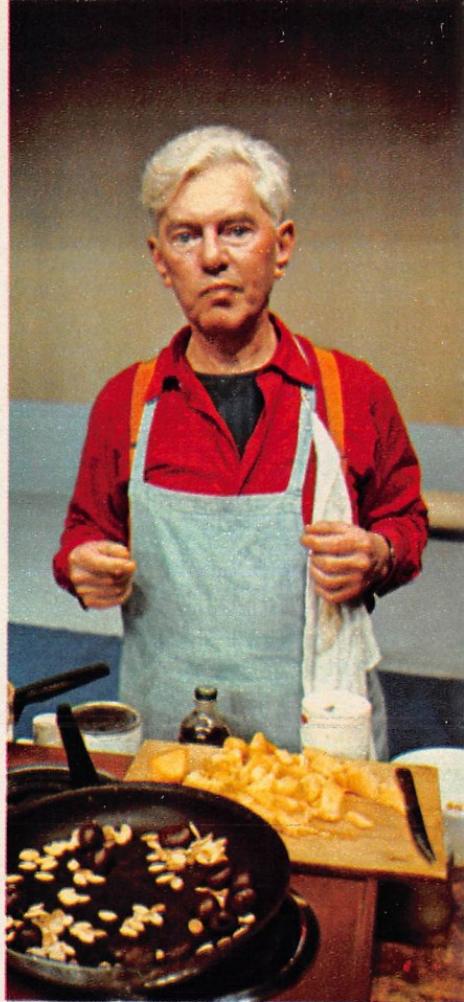

Merely because they have seen horrendous disasters befall me on the TV cooking demonstrations I have done on various television shows—like the slow but complete disintegration of a dish I chose to call The Giant Green Matzoth Ball That Could Eat the World (24 inches in circumference, made green with minced spinach)—some viewers, including alleged friends, a few in high, but most in low, places, seem to think I plan these mishaps deliberately to get laughs.

"Are you trying," a cynical lady viewer wrote, "to be the male Julia Child, or something?" Sadly, I replied that though I would never dare aspire to the exalted heights reached by the beloved French Chef, I did hope fervently that I could get to be Something on TV, after having spent I'd hate to admit how close to half a century as a singularly undistinguished newspaper and magazine reporter.

Until recently I was a once-a-week regular on Skitch Henderson's New York (probably called that because he was born in Birmingham, England), on WNEW-TV, the Metromedia station which has, they tell me, a potential audience of 14 million. Not all, but quite a lot of this vast and, seemingly, ever-appetitive audience wrote letters unlike any I ever got as a result of my previous work. The only mail I received when I used to interview TV, movie and stage actresses; models; so-called society dames; and nubile young ladies in other walks of life, for such publications as the late, lamentable New York Mirror, the Police Gazette and others too demeaning to mention here, were from men who wanted the addresses and telephone numbers of the half-naked chicks over whose photos these cretins had been slavering.

Most, but not all, the letters I get now are from women, and, while I wouldn't call them passionate, some are pretty warm. One lady opened with, "I love you." In the next paragraph, however, she hastened to say, "But I must tell you that I am 74 years old." She wanted a recipe for a cake her late grandmother had often baked, and said she could remember only three ingredients. When I sent her a cake recipe which has, among others, those three ingredients, she wrote back, testily, "My grandmother's cake was better than yours."

The confessions of a colorful TV cook who started out as the champion chicken-liver chopper of the Bronx

A girl who said she was 19 opened her letter with, "I adore you," which caused instant tachycardia, the term my doctor uses for my occasional fast heartbeat; but before she closed with "Love," she said I reminded her of her late grandfather, and that slowed me down quicker and better than any cold shower I've ever taken.

A lady from New Jersey wrote a couple of letters, addressing me as "Dear Cutesy Pootsy," telling me her age and that she was unmarried. She quit writing me after I told her—which she hadn't asked for—how to get an autographed copy of my paperback cookbook for $1.

When I made my TV debut 18 years ago, Ed Sullivan, with only about one-and-a-half years of experience in the medium, had not yet overcome his initial awkwardness, to become the urbane, unflustered, polished performer all the world knows today.

My first exposure on the tube, on a show now long defunct called We, the People, was one of the many unfortunate results of the publication of a book, even more shamefully immodest than this essay, about some of my more peculiar experiences as a reporter who covered cops and chicks.

The only difference between Mr. Sullivan's career—I know I'm violating a TV ethic here by not calling him "Ed"—and mine is that I didn't get back in front of a camera again until 13 years later, on account of another book I'd written. (That first time my wife had to go to a low beer parlor in our neighborhood to see me on TV.)

This time it was a cookbook I'd written, and I was invited by Al Morgan; then the producer of Today, to come on the show and tell Hugh Downs and the world how come a former police reporter and girl-interviewer got to write a newspaper column under the by-line of "Prudence Penny" and then a cookbook with "Formerly Prudence Penny" in parenthesis under my name. Prudence Penny was, and still is, the by-line that food editors on Hearst newspapers often use, and I inherited that mantle when the lady who'd used it for many years departed suddenly. I thereupon proved to the editors and publisher of the Mirror that it was true that I'd been born in back of a restaurant my parents had operated in the Bronx, and I demonstrated the truth of my brag that at the age of six I'd been the champion chicken-liver chopper in the Bronx, if not all of New York City. I made this demonstration in a Chinese restaurant around the corner from the Mirror.

After that appearance on Today, my TV career can best be described as spasmodic.

I was flown to Cleveland (where I was put up in a fleabag hotel because, I was told, it was so close to the TV station) to cook an omelet I'd invented for Mike Douglas when he was doing his show there at WJW-TV. On KNXT-TV in Los Angeles I cooked a different kind of omelet in competition, sort of, with a jolly, fat cooking demonstrator named Mike Roy. I did the same thing—still another omelet—in San Diego, another in the Nation's Capital; and once I went to Philadelphia, carrying under my arm a frozen goose, which I thawed and roasted, filled with a stuffing I think I invented, on WCAU-TV. That one was my proudest achievement, because I had outdone good old Ben Franklin, who had come to that city with only a loaf of bread under his arm.

I wasn't paid for those guest shots (that's what we old TV pros call → them) because I was pushing the sale of my paperback cookbook "Our Man in the Kitchen." For that reason, too, I wasn't paid for something like 20 appearances I made as a guest on a now defunct WCBS-TV show called Two-at-One, which starred a newscaster named Jim Jensen and an uncommonly pretty girl reporter named Joan Murray. (I owe a debt of gratitude to Jensen, for he taught me a great deal about TV; chiefly, how chintzy a great corporation, making great profits, can be.)

Once, introducing me, Jensen said, "He has been on our show so often that we regard him as a member of our family." This impelled me to tell Jensen, Miss Murray, and that well-known "potential audience of 14 million" that "once I worked for a relative and he gave me so much love, just like WCBS-TV, that he felt he didn't have to pay me."

Last spring I was invited by the producer of the WNEW-TV daytime show that is now called Skitch Henderson's New York to make an appearance as a nonpaid guest, with the understanding that my book would be well-plugged. The producer, a sharp young fellow named Rupert Hitzig, asked me to cook, on camera, a dish known as "Steak Diane," which has many variations but is basically meat pan-broiled briefly in butter and oil and various herbs, but which, as the last step before serving, is flamed, generally with cognac.

Everything went well with the demonstration, until I came to the point when I announced, with an assurance that approached arrogance, that instead of cognac, I was using bourbon, not only because that booze was strictly a product of the good old U. S. of A., having been first made by a Baptist minister named Elijah Craig in 1789 in Bourbon County, Kentucky, which, under local option is now a dry county, but also because bourbon, which can have a much higher alcoholic content, is much more flammable than cognac.

I poured a large gulp of bourbon into a long-handled ladle, held a match under the cup of the ladle, and explained that any booze, before being flamed, must be warmed. I poured the warmed booze over the steak in the pan, held the match in the pan as close to the sauce as I could get it, and, sad to say, the booze did not ignite. As the match burned down, my fingers burned and, involuntarily, I dropped it into the pan. Panicked, I raised my eyes to the ceiling of the studio and murmured, not loud enough to be caught by the microphone, "Why hast Thou forsaken me?"

The studio audience, the crew, and the star and producer of the show were convulsed with laughter, for nothing, of course, is as funny as a calamity befalling a show-off schnook. I was not, however, forsaken; I was inspired to fish out of the hot sauce in the pan, with my already burned fingers, the burned-out match, saying loudly, "You must be careful not to let the match fall into the pan when flaming any dish, for a burned-out match does not add anything to the flavor of the dish."

I poured another large swill of booze into the ladle, went through the prescribed routine of warming it, and again I was foozled—it did not ignite. Over the raucousness in the studio, I yelled to the producer, who was standing next to one of the cameras, "I think the stagehands have been nibbling on this booze and have watered it," stepped out of camera range, took a large suck out of the bottle, which I needed at that point for medicinal reasons, to quieten my nerves, and came back on camera wiping my lips with the back of my hand. "I was right," I said, lying, of course. "This booze has been watered." I took the steak out of the pan, poured the boozy sauce into a measuring cup and drank it down. "I'll tell you later," I said, "how the steak is, but right now I can say that the sauce is great."

I managed to escape from the studio unseen and unharmed. A couple of days later the producer asked me to come back on the show, not to cook, but just to talk with the star of the show for a few minutes about my sordid past as a police reporter turned into a food writer named Prudence Penny. I went to the studio, did what I'd been told to do, and then, to my great astonishment, for no one had told—or asked—me about it, it was announced that thenceforth I was going to be a regular once-a-week cooking demonstrator on the show.

Later, the producer showed me a stack of mail received by the station as a result of my calamitous first appearance. They had stopped counting, he said, when they got to 400 letters and post cards. "Because of this mail," he said, "and because I fought like a tiger, I got you on the payroll."

Even if I wanted them—which I really don't—it wasn't at all necessary to plan deliberately for mishaps. With a maximum of eight minutes in the last segment of a 90-minute live show, mishaps are inevitable in trying to demonstrate the cooking of even the most simple dish. And the dishes I did on camera are not simple.

Once I cooked an omelet in a no-stick pan—and the omelet stuck to the pan. How I accomplished that feat I do not know. Fifteen minutes before show time, on one occasion, the antediluvian electric four-burner table-top range supplied by the station suddenly went psychotic and gave forth no heat. The office staff was told hurriedly to work the phones to get a singer, a dancer, a magician, anyone, to fill the spot allotted to me. Five minutes to show time and they hadn't been able to find anyone at such short notice. Somewhere, someplace, I had heard, or read, that in show biz the cardinal rule is, "The Show Must Go On." With this in mind, I approached the producer. "Look," I said stupidly, "if you're willing to take the chance, I'll go on and →

Who needs a cold?

Colds are difficult to avoid—but Neo-Synephrine can make them less inconvenient by helping to restore free breathing in seconds—an advantage over slower-acting medicine taken by mouth. Swollen nasal passages shrink on contact with Neo-Synephrine, permitting drainage and easing that stopped-up feeling. By promoting adequate drainage during a cold, Neo-Synephrine helps prevent lingering sinus congestion after the cold.

Truly fast relief from most hemorrhoid pain and itch.

First, stop the pain. And the itching. Nupercainal® is a unique combination of lubricants plus the most effective topical pain reliever available without a prescription. It relieves pain and itching fast. Provides much longer lasting relief. Nupercainal also soothes inflamed tissue—in turn helps the natural healing process. Moreover Nupercainal facilitates natural movements.

Next, doctors recommend, use common sense. Stay off spicy, highly seasoned foods. Avoid constipation and what causes it. Such as lack of rest and bad eating habits. Stay regular. Sitz baths aid comfort and natural healing.

Above all, use caution. Nupercainal brings relief in most cases and for most types of hemorrhoids. But if symptoms are severe, persistent, frequently recurrent...if there is rectal bleeding...do see your doctor.

do the cooking thing (it was a rather complicated Polynesian-style chicken dish) and talk for however long you want me to, explaining what would be happening to the chicken if the danged range had heat." I was sure he'd spurn this idiotic suggestion, but he crossed me. What he said was, "OK."

After the demonstration—which, oddly, brought in several hundred requests for the recipe, almost all of the writers expressing deep and touching sympathy for my miserable plight—the director, a rather mordacious young fellow named Henry Behar, said, "That was the best one you've done, so from now on your spot is going to be called 'Cooking Without Heat.' "

Because Skitch Henderson's New York is a live and wildly swinging show, and because I was always in the last segment, not infrequently it happened that for one reason or another my time was severely curtailed. Once, an irrepressibly loud-mouthed comedienne (not you, Martha, love) pre-empted so much of my time that I told my audience they could get the recipe for "Broiled Whole Stuffed Fish Stuffed with Good Stuff" only by writing for it, but that "right now I have only enough time to tell you how to make a sardine sandwich on rye bread with a slice of onion." Viewers wrote, asking not only for the fish recipe, but for the sandwich recipe too, and most of them expressed anger with that fat, dumpy lady comedienne.

After that show I met a man who has known me for a major portion of my adult life. He regarded me with compassion in his large, round, brown eyes. "It is, indeed, a cruel world," he said, "which forces you, in the sunset years of your life, to become a ham. Hyman Goldberg? That's a name for a ham?"

Mr. Goldberg has foolishly asked us to say that it will give him intense pleasure to supply our readers with copies of any, or all, recipes mentioned in this rather lengthy confessional essay.—Ed.

HEADLINERS AND BY-LINERS. Profiles on irrepressible performers like Bob Hope, criticism impartially offered by resident critics like Judith Crist—just two of the reasons why this week more people will buy TV Guide to read about television than will buy any other magazine to read about anything else.
